

How to apply for ECRIN services through the ISIDORE website:

You will first send in a pre-application which will be followed by a full application.

Before you apply, we invite you to check the eligibility criteria.

- All scientists from Academia and Industry from European and non-European countries are eligible for this call.
- This call supports transnational access: scientists can only apply to services outside of their country of residence.
- The call supports physical, remote and virtual access to the ISIDORE services.
- The call will remain open as long as funding is available.

To apply:

1. View the Call for Proposals page to ensure that your project matches one of the priority topics listed.
2. Browse the catalogue of services available through this project on the ISIDORE website
3. As part of the consortium, ECRIN will be providing services for regulatory advice, trial preparation and access to clinical trials,
4. To fill out the pre-application form you will need an ORCID number to apply to this call. If you do not have the ORCID number, this is very easy to generate on the ORCID website.
5. Once you have submitted the pre-application, you will receive an acknowledgement email with an ISIDORE ID number. Within two days, you will receive a second email with more information on how to fill out a long application.
6. On the full application page, select the service(s) that you want. You will need to provide the ISIDORE ID number in your full application.
7. Complete the full application and return it to ECRIN via email.
8. ECRIN will then review your application and get back to you.

Get additional information about ISIDORE and the 1st transnational call please read the FAQs

If you are interested in applying for more than one services through ISIDORE, or you have any other question about your application, do not hesitate to contact ISIDORE or ECRIN by clicking on the links.